Eastern Region (Purwanchal) is one development region among the five development regions of Nepal, located at the eastern end of the country. The town of Dhankuta is the capital of the Eastern Region, as well as the capital of the Dhankuta District. The periphery around the town is primarily based on agriculture, with small rural villages scattered throughout the region. Dhankuta is located on the North-South Koshi Highway and is an important commercial and trading center for the Eastern Region of Nepal.

Biratnagar is the gateway to the Koshi Tappu Wildlife Reserve, a peaceful haven for Nepal's flora and fauna and a prime bird-watching destination that is visited by birding enthusiasts from far and wide. Also near Biratnagar is the Hindu pilgrimage site of Baraha Kshetra drawing Hindu devotees to worship.
